MORE INFORMATION

History

The building has a rich history and was originally used as a power station. In the 1920's it was occupied by OXO beef cube and its architect, Albert Moore, incorporated the design into windows on the tower to get around a ban on skyline advertising!

Now an event space, the contemporary, minimalistic design in harmony with its spacious layout, makes OXO2 an extremely versatile venue. The blank canvas, gallery style rooms allow clients the capacity to completely transform the venue, providing unparalleled views of the city to take centre stage.
