WHAT THE MEDIA SAY...

METRO

We loved the very wide array of beer on offer and the loaded buffalo fries. And yes, we tried the slide –honestly, it was a bit bumpy.'

The Telegraph

The bar was thronged, the surfaces shone, and the industrial-chic decoration gleamed as brightly as the day God made it.'

TimeOut

As well as all those facilities, BrewDogWaterloo is one of the company's first bars to open following its 'BrewDogBlueprint', in which 50 percent of the profits generated by each of its bars will be shared directly with the staff who work there.

UNILAD

'Housed inside The Sidings at the newly developed Waterloo Station, the new bar and restaurant will also be home to co-working spaces and pods, a micro-brewery, a Grind café, duckpin bowling alleys, a podcast studio, meeting rooms, a not-for-profit floristry and a retro ice cream van serving Hackney Gelato.'

London Evening Standard

'Craft beerbehemoth BrewDogwill open what it claims is London's biggest bar this week.

The Waterloo venue – which is set to feature 60 taps, an on-site brewhouse, duckpin bowling lanes, co-working spaces, a podcast studio and even a slide from one floor to the next.'

THE SUNDAY TIMES

'No one can possibly be bored'

VICE

'Loads of fantastic remote working options'
